MadHouse Moxie shows some swagger

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

"I had this idea for a band back in 2019," says Tabitha Tolbert, lead singer and mandolin player in the new band MadHouse Moxie. "I knew what kind of songs I wanted to do, the costumes I wanted to wear. I had it all worked out in my head. I just hadn't found the right bandmates yet."

MadHouse Moxie will be playing this Saturday at Richwood on the River at 5 p.m., followed by the new rock band Bluebird Alley Band, then the Famous Amy Noel.

"Then one day back in April I was at a party for Jonathan Stanley, my vocal coach, just talking to some people, and behind me I overheard some guy say he was looking for a band to play with. I about broke my neck whipping my head around to see who said that."

Dave Myers picks up the story. "I was at the party because Jonathan is my piano teacher, but I didn't know Tabitha. All of a sudden she's in front of me asking what instruments do I play and what kind of band am I looking to be in. We end up walking over to Thomas Family Winery to try out some tunes together."

"Dave starts playing the Winery piano," Tabitha continues, "and I try out a few of my favorite songs. We knew right away we had a musical chemistry and we might have

Alleged biker gang members charged in Dupont shooting

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Formal charges were filed Monday in Jefferson Circuit Court against five alleged members of a motorcycle gang in connection with the June 22 shooting death of a Georgetown, Kentucky, man on North John Deere Road near Dupont but none of the five actually pulled the trigger on the fatal shot.

According to an investigation by the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department, Indiana State Police and Jefferson County Prosecutor's Office, sealed affidavits were filed on Monday and later unsealed on Wednesday, charging two of the men with Level 1 and multiple Level 2 felonies, two more with multiple Level 2 and other felonies and a woman with lesser felony charges.

Flood victims reach out for assistance, answers

BY MARK CAMPBELL

When a huge thunderstorm unleashed massive flash flooding on downtown Madison and throughout Jefferson County on June 19, more than 70 homes and businesses were impacted with two-thirds of those sustaining major damage and only one-third insured for flooding.

After a week of struggling to bail out, cleanup and salvage what was left, nearly 100 residents and property owners impacted by the disaster showed up at a firehouse meeting on Monday, June 28 — just blocks from the worst of the carnage — seeking assistance and answers so that they could try to begin moving forward.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said the hardest hit area was the North Walnut Street and Jefferson Street neighborhoods in downtown Madison where an estimated 6-9 inches of rainfall over a two- to three-hour period in Jefferson County came roiling down Crooked Creek in a wall of water and debris that flooded everything in its path. However, he noted

SW to seek advice on how to best use $2.2M

BY BOB DEMAREE

Southwestern Jefferson County Consolidated Schools will participate in an ESSER consortium as it contemplates how to best utilize the $2.2 million that the school district is scheduled to receive from the American Rescue Act — the third phase of the Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Fund provided by the federal government — Superintendent Jeffrey Bates announced at Monday's board meeting.

Bates said the Indiana Department of Education is providing a grant in which Skybound Education of Indianapolis will lead the strategic planning consortium of Indiana school districts that will allow them to collaborate and develop a plan to maximize the one-time COVID-19 relief funds.

"With a sizable influx of federal relief funding for schools, IDOE is working with schools to provide a resource for their strategic planning," said Holly Lawson, IDOE Deputy Director of Communications. "To support this, schools have the option to opt-in to a planning consortium with other school corporation leaders, working with an expert facilitator to maximize their use of these one-time funds."

Lawson listed seven other school corporations in the state that are participating including North Central Parke Community, Culver Community, South Central Community, South Spencer, York Community and Borden-Henryville.

Bates said initially he was reluctant for Southwestern to participate, especially after it was initially communicated that the consortium involved matching funds up to $125,000. However, the state has now expressed there are "no direct costs to the schools for participating in this program," according to Lawson.

With no financial cost to the school corporation, Bates called it a "win-win situation." He said Southwestern schools will still make the final decision on how the $2,227,633.20 in funds will be used, while receiving advice about how the funds can be most effectively utilized for the betterment of the students and the school corporation, along with the possibility of collaboration with other school districts.

In other business:

• Hanover Town President Kenny Garrett attended to report on the town council's plans to refurbish tennis courts at the Hanover Community Park, and asked if the school board is interested in contributing to the estimated $85,000 cost.

"Whatever you can do to help ... It's great if you can help, but no issues/no problem if you don't," he said, noting that because Southwestern schools use the courts for its tennis program, "we wanted to keep you in the loop."

Garrett said the town council is working toward several upgrades at the park, "and while we're in the middle of that, I thought that we would upgrade the tennis courts to where they need to be," he said.

• Students Adrea Liter and Kaia Mathis asked the board to consider changes in the school corporation dress code concerning shorts, which Liter said are now knee length for girls. She said she would prefer a standard in which the length of the shorts is determined by where the end of the shorts would be from arms stretched downwards to the fingertips. She said they are seeking a length that's more consistent with what boys are doing, citing a survey that they had taken in which 91% did not think that the dress code is enforced equally between girls and boys. Liter said she wants students to "feel comfortable to learn for the future. We don't want to make big changes. We just want it to make sense."

Board President Rick Stockdale commended the girls for coming before the board. "We don't often hear from the students," he said.

Stockdale asked to time to digest the information, noting, "we will take a look, and come to some agreement that's to the benefit of everyone and you."

• Katie King, director of child nutrition, announced that in order to continue offering free breakfast and lunch to all students that Southwestern needs to increase the adult breakfast price from $2.20 to $2.50 and the adult lunch price from $2.70 to $4.60.

"It's still cheaper than McDonald's," noted board member Misty Jacobs on the proposed adult prices.

Stockdale said free meals are "a big perk for the kids."

Jacobs agreed, noting the proposal is "all about the kids" and so the free meals provided through the United States Department of Agriculture under the Seamless Summer Option (SSO) program can be extended until June 30, 2022.

• Approved changes in the Classified Employee Handbook. Pay will be increased for substitute teachers to $70 per day for those with a high school diploma (previously $60 per day), and $90 per day with an associates degree 60 plus college credit hours and $100 per day with a bachelors degree (previously $75 per day for those with an associates degree or higher).

"Substitutes tell us they would rather sub for us, but sometimes go to other school corporations because of the pay. Now, with equal to or above pay, we should be able to get the subs we need," said Laura Cash Boldery, assistant to the superintendent/corporation treasurer. Boldery said substitute rates were compared to other nearby school districts such as Madison, Switzerland County, Austin and Jennings County.

Boldery said Southwestern has also struggled to hire new employees, citing its low entry level wage. She also said there have been discussions that the federal minimum wage might eventually be raised to $15 per hour. With the current rate of $10.60 for non-certified employees, she said "it would be extremely difficult to find the money all at one time" if they are required to pay the $15 per hour rate. "It will be easier if we gradually get there," she said.

Boldery proposed that rates be increased to $12.72 per hour. She said they have increased the beginning hourly wage in each scale by 20%, and then within the scale 20 cents per year was added to each one.

• Approved rehiring Angela Northern as library media specialist at the middle and high school, effective Jan. 1, along with the resignation of both Robert Green at the high school effective June 25, and Alyssa Brawner as a fifth grade teacher.

• Approved the hiring of Camille Leach and Doug Rusk as high school social studies teachers, Phillip Waylon as middle school math teacher; Alysha Clark and Lauren Toler as elementary teachers; Cara Shaffer as an elementary special education teacher; Tonia Joseph as data integration specialist; Denise Hackney as middle school Social Emotional Learning (SEL) specialist, and Brittany Watson as high school SEL specialist. Additionally, several coaches were rehired including Chris Johnson as varsity volleyball coach; Jason Poteet as boys varsity tennis coach; Seth Shields as boys varsity soccer coach; Nancy Totten as girls varsity soccer coach; Zac Nussbaum as boys varsity cross country coach; and Stephanie Nussbaum as girls varsity cross country coach.

• Selected Bickers Flooring and General Contracting of Madison to remove carpet and install new carpet in the music room at Southwestern Elementary School at a cost of $7,200. The Flooring Gallery also offered a quote of $7,276.50 for the work.

SHOOTING

Dustin B. "Kutter" Lindner, 35, of Georgetown, Kentucky, was fatally wounded shortly after 4 a.m. on Tuesday, June 22, by Shawn Rudis at 8913 N. John Deere Road, Dupont. However, Rudis was apparently acting in self-defense because Lindner was allegedly among a group of four "Pagans" and "Warlocks" motorcycle club members who had gone to the remote location with handguns and knives to confront Rudis over his alleged affiliation with one of the clubs. The suspects were allegedly upset that Rudis was displaying patches and had tattoos representing those clubs but was not a gang member and might even be an undercover informant, exchanged gunfire with Rudis and Lindner was struck once with a round from a .223 rifle.

Lindner and four other men planned the attack, went armed to the remote Dupont area in two vehicles and he and Jason W. Brewer, 35, and David K. Faulker, 52, then went onto the property on foot to look for Rudis.

The four defendants are charged with murder under an Indiana law that allows associates in the commission of a crime to be charged when anyone dies as a result of that action. Brewer and Faulker are also charged with attempted murder because they, along with Lindner, allegedly exchanged gunfire with Rudis while he was holed up in a shed near the end of North John Deere Lane.

The four men are also charged with attempted robbery and attempted burglary — a police investigation indicated they had intended to rob Rudis — and three men and the woman are charged with obstruction of justice in connection with an alleged coverup of the crime by planning and disposing of weapons and vehicles used during the attack. The woman, who was not along on the raid, is charged with assisting a criminal and obstruction of justice for her role after the fact.

According to the affidavits, while leaving the scene of the crime, the two vehicles were involved in a collision, causing damage that was later confirmed on surveillance cameras. In interviews with investigators, at least one of the suspects said they made plans to disassemble the weapons and discard the parts at multiple streams and lakes in Jefferson and Jennings County and to remove the vehicles out of state. Parts from the weapons were recovered by ISP divers at locations provided by the suspect and the vehicles were also recovered.

Since the five defendants are all allegedly members of a motorcycle club, Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter has opted to pursue a criminal gang enhancement on all charges — meaning that if the defendants are found guilty they could face additional sentences on any convictions.

All five have been arrested on warrants with two incarcerated in Ohio and awaiting extradition to Indiana and one each lodged at jails in Jefferson, Jennings and Dearborn counties in Indiana.

DUSTIN "KUTTER" LINDNER

Those charged include:

• Jason W. Brewer, 35, is charged with murder, attempted murder, attempted robbery, attempted burglary and obstruction of justice

• Michael J. Karnuth, 31, charged with murder, attempted robbery, attempted burglary and obstruction of justice with an enhancement of criminal gang activity

• David K. Faulker, 52, is charged with murder, attempted robbery and attempted burglary

• Gary W. Fletcher, 40, is charged with murder, attempted murder, attempted robbery, attempted burglary and obstruction of justice.

• Jordan M. Lowe, 26, of North Vernon, is charged with assisting a criminal and obstruction of justice.

Indiana State Police Detective Nate Adams is the lead investigator in this case and has been assisted by multiple agencies, including the Jefferson County Coroner's Office, Jefferson County Sheriff's Department, the Jennings County Sheriff's Department, the Ohio County Sheriff's Department, the Rising Sun Police Department and the North Vernon Police Department in Indiana as well as the Hamilton County (Ohio) Sheriff's Department, the Butler County (Ohio) Sheriff's Department and the Cincinnati Fugitive Task Force in Ohio.

Mark Campbell

Jefferson County Emergency Management Director Troy Morgan, right, shields his ear to better hear a question from the audience during Monday's informational meeting at the Walnut Street Fire Company No. 4 for property owners and renters impacted by last weekend's flash flooding in the North Walnut and Jefferson streets neighborhoods. A standing-room-only crowd attended the hour-long session aimed at sharing information and getting residents to complete impact assessments for damage assessments.

that damage was felt up to 5 miles away and in other communities across Indiana like Bloomington where at least one person died in flooding.

"Crooked Creek was overwhelmed by the sheer volume of the water," Courtney said, noting the power of the flood was enough to re-route the channel of the creek and wipe out anything in its path.

Courtney said the big blessing in Madison was that no human life was lost, but the impact of the flooding will be felt for a long time. He called Monday's meeting at the Walnut Street Fire Company No. 4 the first step in trying to put people's lives back together.

"Tonight's about information — the sharing of information for the recovery," said Courtney, urging residents to reach out to the city and the various responding agencies who can provide help and assist with the damage assessment to quickly gather as much information as possible so that Madison and Jefferson County can make their case on why his weeklong emergency declaration needs to be extended into a state and federal disaster declaration that will open avenues for public assistance, loans and local, state and federal support as well as other assistance the community needs to get back on its feet.

"We won't have answers to all of your questions tonight," Courtney added, assuring those in attendance that there will more meetings to come. "We're navigating through a difficult process."

Courtney said the focus right now is meeting residents' short-term needs, the cleanup and the damage assessment with hopes of getting a disaster declaration so that Madison "meets thresholds for state and federal funding."

Jefferson County Emergency Management Director Troy Morgan reiterated that plan, asking residents to fill out forms at the meeting or go online to do them there and cooperate with Department of Homeland Security representatives who were to arrive in the area Tuesday to begin their detailed investigation into the flood.

Representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross and church organizations talked about services they offer — meals, shelter, cleaning supplies and in some cases assistance in rebuilding — and how they have already reached out, can be contacted and what services they can provide.

"This is a multi-level process involving multiple entities," Morgan noted.

Morgan and Courtney said every impacted resident needs to fill out a County Disaster Initial Intake/Assessment Form that was circulated at the meeting, available on their websites at Madison-in.gov or Jeffersoncounty.in.gov or by calling 211. They also passed out pamphlets with details on how to file the application as well as other resources on the cleanup and rebuilding process.

At a point in the meeting the focus shifted to flood prevention as many residents voice concerns about rebuilding in an area that has been hit hard twice in six years. Some said the trauma of the June 19 flash flood hit harder than before because the water came so fast and so strong that up to 35 residents feared drowning while waiting to be evacuated by boat.

Morgan noted that local flash flood advisories had been issued prior to the flooding based on storm forecasts and Courtney said rescuers, knowing that flooding was a possibility, were prepared and quick to respond to the scene even though the sheer number of residents needing assistance was a strain on resources.

"It was a traumatic experience and that's not going to go away tomorrow," Courtney said, later adding, "We can't stop flooding. The goal is to mitigate it in the future."

Courtney went on to note "there are no short term solutions" and the issue will take a joint effort by the Department of Natural Resources, the Army Corps of Engineers, Homeland Security, the Indiana Department of Emergency Management and state and local governments and involve engineering, land acquisition, mitigation of property in the flood zone and mitigation of future flooding. "I'm not going to give you a false promise ... what I will do is work really hard with all these agencies to find a solution."

End relationship, find love elsewhere

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I have been seeing a woman for about eight years now. She is married, and I am not. We started out as high school sweethearts, and then we grew up and had our own lives for about 30 years. Then we found each other again through social media, and I fell in love all over again. She keeps telling me that she is not happy with her husband anymore and that she wants to be with me. But lately, she has made me feel like she doesn't care about me or us anymore. I am just at a loss. I wish I could just walk away, but I love her too much. The sad thing is that I have tried to tell her how I feel, and she says nothing. If she's not in love with me anymore, I wish she would just walk away. What should I do? — Mind on the Mrs.

Dear MOTM: You're in love with a collection of ideas, not a person: the nostalgia for how you remember your high school relationship, and the anticipation for how you imagine your future relationship. But what you have presently is not a relationship at all. If she hasn't left her husband after eight years, she's not leaving him. Quit waiting for her to take action, and take some action yourself. End the relationship, and open your heart up for love and fulfillment in the here and now.

Dear Annie: I am writing after reading the letter from "Invisibly Ill." My husband was ill for more than 18 years. He kept telling his doctors that he had a pain in his face. Eventually, he was diagnosed with tic douloureux. Tic douloureux, or trigeminal neuralgia, is a severe, stabbing pain to one side of the face. It stems from one or more branches of the nerve that supplies sensation to the face, the trigeminal nerve. It is considered one of the most painful conditions.

My husband underwent surgery to try to move a blood vessel, without success. He had to stop working. It took two years to get him on disability insurance, due to the unusualness of his condition. Some family or friends didn't believe he was sick.

Only people who have gone through something like this know what you are talking about. My husband passed away nine days before our 39th anniversary. — You Are Not Alone

Dear YANA: The pain your husband experienced from trigeminal neuralgia must have been terrible. I'm sorry that judgmental friends and family made it worse. I'm printing your letter to remind those struggling with invisible illnesses that they are not alone — and to remind the rest of us that invisible illnesses are, unfortunately, very real.

Bitten by love

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I ended a relationship about a year ago when it turned abusive. My girlfriend at the time acted like she was going to give me a kiss after an argument but instead bit me in the face. The first time was bad, but about a month later (after not dumping her immediately like I should have), she did it again except viciously, like an animal. Needless to say, I've been happily single since.

I'm looking to get back into dating now, as I feel like I have healed and grown from this, but I still have one problem.

I'm afraid of letting any new potential partners kiss me. If someone gets their face too close to mine or I can feel their breath, I panic. Total amygdala hijack.

How do I ask a woman whose kisses I want to not kiss me?

I know that with a little time and some desensitization by planned exposure, I can overcome this, but I just feel like it's a terribly unfair thing to ask of a new potential partner.

I'm concerned about one aspect specifically: How do I ask this of them and not freak them out or make them feel unsafe in the immediate? Or if not unsafe, then like an absolute rejection?

"Hey, so, don't kiss me, please" would make me feel rejected. But if I come out and explain why, wouldn't that give you the insta-creeps? Got any suggestions? — Twice Bitten

Dear Twice Bitten: Writing this column is a privilege I'm grateful to have, but it's not easy hearing how people abuse the ones they're supposed to love. I'm so sorry that your ex-girlfriend did this to you. Of course the trauma would make it difficult for you to kiss anyone again. While you might be able to overcome this just fine on your own over time, I encourage you to seek support in the process. Call the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 800-799-7233, or text "START" to 88788. These empathetic trained specialists can help you work through what you're feeling and develop a game plan to help you feel safe again. In the meantime, my advice is just to let any woman you're dating know that you'd like to take it slowly. You don't owe anyone details you're not comfortable sharing yet. And if such a reasonable request scares a woman off, then she wasn't the one for you.

Dear Annie: Your answer to "In Love but Losing," who was dating a younger man but whose adult son did not approve, was great. My boyfriend is 27 years younger than me. We have been together for eight years, living together for seven. We rarely even remember that there is an age difference. My son, who is a few years older than my boyfriend, didn't approve at first but kept an open mind, and now he and my boyfriend get along. They call, text, hang out, sometimes even without me. The only family problem we still have is with my boyfriend's mom and sister. (I'm the same age as his mother.) They feel I am keeping him from finding someone to be happy with for the rest of his life. My response to them is every day he leaves the house to go to work, he chooses to return. — No Judgment There

Dear NJT: Congrats on eight great years. Love is the world's most precious commodity. Far be it from me or anyone else to begrudge those who find it in unexpected places.

the makings of a new band. Turns out Dave is a great guitarist, and he enjoys my eclectic song choices."

"I actually live over in Port Royal, Kentucky," says Dave. It's about 25 miles from Madison. And I'd been in a band in North Vernon for some time, but that was a long drive. I was looking for something closer. Madison is perfect, and it's such a great music town.

"I actually worked at the State Hospital some years back and we had a little house band there. It was Kenny Vest on drums, Jen Rowlett sang and played keys, Ross Nunes played lead guitar, Curt Vanderbur on bass and Bridget Hunt joined us sometimes on flute.

"For this upcoming show at Richwood we are very fortunate to have Dennis O'Neal joining us on drums. I haven't played with him before but I've been told he's a great musician. I can't wait."

Tabitha explains the MadHouse Moxie concept. "Currently the show consists of two sets. The first set is country and I come out in a kind of Patsy Cline inspired costume and sing songs like In the Jailhouse Now and Jolene.

"For the second set I change into a more punk rock sort of black attire and we do songs like I Wanna Be Sedated by the Ramones and Stop Draggin' My Heart Around by Tom Petty. Our goal is to eventually work up a third set that would be more ballads and standards.

"Ultimately we want to play a lot more shows, maybe get some gigs in the larger cities around the area. Honestly, a dream come true would be to play the Mad Hop Festival right here in Madison. Oh, and House of Jane, of course. I'm working on my original songwriting, so maybe someday soon."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

My recommendations this week are focused on the riverfront, naturally. Thursday you can see Joslyn & the Sweet Compression for free, and then Friday & Saturday the Roostertail Music Festival has a stellar line-up of great bands. Now, if Regatta is not your cup of tea, I'd go see the Quiet Hollers at Red Bike Hall on Thursday, they are amazing! Friday you have some great local choices at Mad Paddle and the Taproom. And on Saturday they are throwing another music party over at Richwood on the River. I've been told you can see the fireworks from their lawn! And then on Sunday after the big race, we're ALL going to the Taproom to watch Jordan Wilson and the boys. Happy Regatta everybody!

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

Co-queens crowned for Regatta Festival

BY BOB DEMAREE

Two queens are better than one, or that was the feeling Monday night when 2019 Miss Madison Regatta Kennedy Easton crowned Chloe Ferris and Katie Royce as Co-Queens of the 2021 Miss Madison Regatta Pageant.

With the Madison Regatta resuming in 2021 after being canceled last year due to COVID-19, there were just two contestants for this year's event. With the field so small the decision was made to have two queens with the crowning ceremony held on the Regatta Judges Stand on the riverfront with Ferris and Royce are sharing this year's Miss Madison Regatta title.

"I'm excited about it," said Ferris. "I have known Katie my whole life. There is no one else I would rather be queen with."

Royce agreed, "I am honored to share the crown with her."

The two girls said they have had a long friendship. They both attended E.O. Muncie Elementary together, and graduated this year from Madison Consolidated High School.

Miss Madison Regatta organizer Tara Cox commended Ferris and Royce for their willingness to share the crown. "They volunteered to do it, and I think that says a lot about the character of these girls," she said.

Ferris couldn't be more thrilled with the honor "to represent the city. I'm excited to go to all the Regatta events with Katie, and to meet Jimmy Shane. I've dreamed of being the Regatta queen since I was a little girl, and being in the parade like a princess. This is like a dream come true."

Royce said she has had an eye on being Miss Madison Regatta for four years. "I was in the Miss Regatta Teen Pageant when I was 15, and was second runnerup, and I knew I wanted to keep doing this. I really enjoyed the interview, and being in a dress, and representing the community." And now to actually be the queen "makes me feel real good," she said.

For 2019 Queen Easton, she was thrilled to the have honor of serving as Miss Madison Regatta. "I don't want to give it up, but I'm excited" that Ferris and Royce will have the opportunity to serve.

"We're still having the Gold Cup and it's supposed to be great weather," Easton noted.

A Hanover College senior, Easton lives in Henryville, but grew up in Carrollton, Kentucky, and has enjoyed the Madison Regatta for many years. "I looked forward to it every year," said Easton, noting she is a Regatta fan for life.

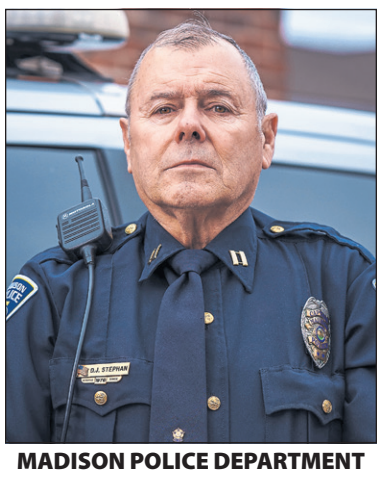
MPD's Stephan to be Regatta Parade grand marshal

BY THE COURIER STAFF

The City of Madison announced this week that Madison Police Department Captain Dan "D. J." Stephan will be the grand marshal of Friday's Madison Regatta Parade. Stephan has been a member of MPD for more than 45 years and will officially retire on Nov. 5, 2021.

Stethen began his career with MPD in August of 1976, and rose through the department's ranks to his final promotion to captain on July 9, 2000. Over his many years with MPD, Stephan served the department in various capacities from firearms instructor — where he won several "top gun" awards in competitions — to working 44 of Madison parades like the one he will grand marshal Friday. Stephan has also been an active member in the Canaan area as a farmer and grandfather.



MADISON POLICE DEPARTMENT CAPTAIN DAN "DJ" STETHEN

"Following his 45 years and three months of serving the citizens of Madison, Indiana, Captain Dan Stephan is Madison's longest serving merit police officer, and we are proud to have him on our police force. His fellow MPD officers will greatly miss him," said Chief of Police John Wallace.

"We are honored to have Captain Stephan as our grand marshal for this year's parade and appreciate his dedication to the police department and the community here in Madison," Mayor Bob Courtney said.

The parade begins at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 2 on Main Street. There will be several street closings or parking limitations in conjunction with the event.

The city will close Main Street between the west side of Walnut Street and the east side of Cragmont Street, along with sections of Cragmont and Jefferson streets near the parade route from 3 p.m. until after the parade. There will also be areas where no parking will be allowed during those hours and signs will be posted.

Shane ready to defend Gold Cup crown

Driver will steer the Miss HomeStreet this weekend

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Jimmy Shane strolled into the media area in Guntersville, Alabama, last weekend sporting a new look. Never the most clean-shaven of men, the Miss HomeStreet driver arrived with a full-on mustache, which combined with his mirrored sunglasses gave him a distinctly 1970s look.

"The mustache is as bushy as my eyebrows," Shane joked. "Now I have three of them."

Shane's new look won't last — be promises it'll be shaved off by this weekend — but Shane will be back in his customary place when he pilots the U-1 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison in the APBA Gold Cup this weekend on the Ohio River and looking for a little 1970s magic.

Shane spent much of last weekend's season opener serving as a spotter while Jeff Bernard got the lion's-share of the seat time. Shane did get a chance to get on the water, testing the boat Sunday morning and running in one heat where he placed second.

It was all part of the Miss Madison Racing Team's plan for what appears to be an abbreviated season as the sport returns from its one-year layoff due to COVID-19.

"The team had a game plan for the first two races of the season. With the rest of the season so uncertain, we wanted to make sure that both Jeff and I were re-qualified as drivers and we were able to do that," Shane said. "Now, we're focused on getting the boat ready for this weekend."

Part of Miss Madison's plan was to shelve its top-tier boat in favor of the team's older boat, the 2007-vintage craft that has 23 race wins and a record 165 heat victories to its credit. Dressed in the colors of sponsor Goodman Real Estate, but still sporting the name Miss HomeStreet, the boat hit the water on Guntersville Lake last weekend with Bernard running in two preliminary heats and the final.

The results were a mixed bag for the team. The boat qualified fourth-fastest as the team chased fuel flow problems but Bernard won both of his preliminary heats. In the final, Bernard was set up in lane two with an eye toward winning the final when he jumped the gun and settled for fourth.

Shane, who had a close-up view of all of the action and was in Bernard's ear all weekend, said he was pleased with the way the weekend turned out.

"Overall, I think we are happy. We qualified in the upper 150s and the boat got faster and faster as the weekend wore on," Shane said. "In the final, we knew that we had to keep the Strong boats on our outside and we did that, but we were just a hair over. But really, we finished third on the water and only lost one position which was about 50 points and we're coming into Madison second in the high points. Overall, we're happy."

Shane said the team plans on putting its best equipment in the boat for this weekend's race. Not only is it the team's hometown race, but it's for the APBA Gold Cup as well. Miss Madison won its first Gold Cup at Madison in 1971 and another in 2019 — which Shane comes into the weekend as the defending champ.

"This is an important race for us and we're here to win it," Shane said. "This boat has the fastest Gold Cup competition speed ever so we know it's capable."

This year's Madison Regatta will be run on the longer 2.5-mile course which extends under the Milton-Madison Bridge, rather than the shorter 2-mile course which fans saw two years ago. Shane says he has no preference on which course they run — "I've won on both," he said with a laugh — but he also said that the longer course presents a greater challenge to teams.

"This is really a crew chief's race. The driver plays a big part but it is up to the crew chiefs to have the right setup," Shane said. "Because of the short turns, you need a smaller gearbox or you'll just go dead in the water but on the long straightaways, you need the bigger box or you'll not have enough speed. Finding that right combination is the key."

J. Michael Kelly, who has now won four-straight races on the H1 Unlimited Series dating back to the 2019 season, comes into the race with a 251-point lead in the National High Points Standings after winning the season opener in Guntersvill aboard the U-8 Miss Tri-Cities.

The same boats that ran in Guntersville are expected to be in Madison. The rest of the fleet includes: Corey Peabody, U-9 Pinnacle Peak Consultants; Jamie Nilsen, U-11 J&Ds; Andrew Tate, U-12 Graham Trucking; Dave Villwock, U-40 Miss Beacon Plumbing; and Dustin Echols, U-440 Bucket List Racing.

After this weekend, the rest of the H1 schedule is up in air. The series has races scheduled in the Tri-Cities, Washington on July 23-25 and San Diego on Sept. 17-19, but neither of those

'A miracle': Kelly back in the pits 7 months after brain aneurysm

Miss Tri-Cities driver's wife stricken over Thanksgiving

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

On Sunday, as temperatures in northern Alabama soared past 90 degrees, Angela Kelly was busy running around the media area simultaneously trying to keep track of her two sons while watching her husband drive an Unlimited hydroplane. Considering everything that she has gone through, it was a remarkable thing to see.

A little more than seven months after suffering a brain aneurysm that left her in critical condition and fighting for her life, Angela Kelly has recovered enough to resume her life. There is still work to be done for sure, but for the Kelly family, the worst is in the rear-view mirror.

"I didn't know if I was going to be racing this year," said Angela's husband, J. Michael Kelly, while fighting back tears. "She's fought hard and she's back."

Castellanos hits slam as Reds rally past Phillies, 12-4

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — After crushing a grand slam in the seventh inning Monday night, Nick Castellanos thrust his fist in the air as the crowd at Great American Ball Park chanted "MVP! MVP!"

He is certainly making a case.

Castellanos had three hits and a career-high seven RBIs, helping the Cincinnati Reds rally for a 12-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Castellanos, who leads the majors with a .347 batting average, heard more "MVP" chants when he doubled home a run in the eighth.

"I'm not going to lie — (it's) inspiring," Castellanos said of the "MVP" cheers.

Cincinnati trailed 4-2 before Castellanos connected for his sixth career grand slam, driving a 1-1 fastball from Neftali Feliz (0-1) deep to center.

The Reds added six more in the eighth, blowing it open against the Phillies' sputtering bullpen. Eugenio Suárez and Tyler Stephenson scored on a throwing error by reliever Enyel De Los Santos. Castellanos drove in Jonathan India with a two-out double, and Joey Votto added a solo drive.

Heath Hembree (2-3) pitched a scoreless inning for the win.

"So many good things happened," Reds manager David Bell said. "Big night from Nick, of course. Also, every position player who played tonight reached base. We had a bunch of singles to keep things going, and then some big hits."

PADRES 5, REDS 4 (WEDNESDAY)

Tommy Pham homered, San Diego relievers pitched four scoreless innings and the Padres outlasted the Reds 5-4 on Tuesday night for their 10th win in 11 games.

San Diego stranded a season-high 16 runners — leaving the bases loaded in the third, sixth and seventh innings — and utilized seven relievers after Craig Stammen lasted two innings.

But they got all the runs they needed in the first four and beat the Reds again after sweeping a four-game series at Petco Park two weeks ago.

The Reds chipped away with runs in the first and fourth innings.

Kentucky to allow college athletes to earn off likeness

BY BRUCE SCHREINER
AND PIPER HUDSPETH BLACKBURN

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's governor signed an order Thursday allowing the state's college athletes — including players on the nationally renowned Kentucky and Louisville men's basketball teams — to make money through the use of their name, image or likeness.

Gov. Andy Beshear

Gov. Andy Beshear said he wielded his executive authority as a matter of fairness for college athletes, adding that for decades companies and institutions have profited off them.

"Those athletes deserve to be compensated for their image and likeness," the Democratic governor told reporters. "Think about what image and likeness is? It's your name. It's what you look like. It is intrinsically yours. And while I don't think these athletes mind that they also lift up their school, they deserve to be a part of that as well."

His executive order also will spare Kentucky's colleges from being at a competitive disadvantage with rival schools in other states that will have laws enabling athletes to profit off their name, image or likeness, Beshear said.

Beshear said his executive order takes effect July 1, when similar measures passed in several other states will become law.

His office said he was the first governor to make the change by executive order.

Existing state law gave him the authority to take the action, the governor said.

"This is going to last until either the NCAA fully and finally acts, or the legislature is back in session, at which time we all agree we would need legislation," Beshear said.

Beshear's action won praise from the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville. UK plays in the Southeastern Conference and UofL competes in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The move comes just days after the Supreme Court ruled against the NCAA in an antitrust case that complicated how the association is going about reform to its rule regarding compensation for athletes for use of their name, image or likeness.

The NCAA is moving towards a more hands-off approach that will provide no uniform national rules and let schools follow state laws or set their own guidelines if no state laws apply.

Federal lawmakers also are working on legislation that would govern how college athletes can earn money off their fame and celebrity.

Beshear's action won praise from the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville. UK plays in the Southeastern Conference and UofL competes in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Bringing the state of Kentucky into competitive balance with other states across the country and, more specifically, the Atlantic Coast Conference is critical," Vince Tyra, U of L's vice president for intercollegiate athletics, said in a release issued by the governor's office.

UK athletics director Mitch Barnhart said the governor's action "provides us the flexibility we need at this time to further develop policies around name, image and likeness."

"We are appreciative of that support, as it is a bridge until such time as state and/or federal laws are enacted," Barnhart said in the same release from Beshear's office. "The landscape of college sports is now in the midst of dramatic and historic change — perhaps the biggest set of shifts and changes since scholarships were first awarded decades ago."

Beshear, who feuded with the state's Republican-dominated legislature over his coronavirus-related executive actions, won an endorsement Thursday from a key lawmaker for using his executive authority to enable college athletes to monetize their name, image and likeness.

Kentucky Senate President Robert Stivers, a Republican, said "we are supportive of the governor's narrow and temporary action today, as it provides the tools needed to ensure that Kentucky's student-athletes are given ample opportunity. Our commitment to permanent protections for these students will be addressed early in the next legislative session."

Kentucky lawmakers will reconvene in early January for their next regular session.

In Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, New Mexico and Texas, laws go into effect July 1 that make it impermissible for the NCAA and members schools to prevent athletes from being paid by third parties for things like sponsorship deals, online endorsements and personal appearances.

The NCAA had hoped for a national law from Congress that has not come, and its own rule-making has been bogged down for months.

College sports leaders are instead moving toward the type of patchwork regulation they have been warning against for months.

Colts join rest of NFL in playing games at full capacity

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts will play this season's home games in front of crowds at full capacity after the local county health department approved the team's plan Tuesday.

The announcement means all 32 NFL teams intend to open the season in front of full houses this September.

Team officials said in a release that most of last season's COVID-19 protections will be relaxed or eliminated, though specifics are expected to come later this summer. The team also said it will continue to be vigilant to kept fans safe and healthy.

Last season, the Colts played in front of crowds of up to 12,500 in the 63,000-seat stadium.

"We were fortunate to be able to host fans in 2020 through the pandemic, and those fans were as loud and proud as ever," Colts owner Jim Irsay said in a statement.

"But gamedays at Lucas Oil Stadium are like family reunions, and it wasn't quite the same without our entire Colts family alongside us. We can't wait to reopen the stadium doors to all our fans so they can take this journey with us as we work to bring a Super Bowl title back to Indianapolis."

The Colts host Seattle in the Sept. 12 season opener. The announcement came the same day team officials announced Indy would return to Grand Park Sports Campus in nearby Westfield, Indiana, for training camp — in front of fans.

Players report July 27 and the first practice will be held July 28, but fans must maintain a 20-foot distance from players and coaches because of NFL protocols.

The Hamilton County health department approved a plan that allows for 100% capacity, no COVID-19 screening and optional face coverings. Fans will not be allowed to attend practices that are moved indoors. Indy is scheduled to host joint practices with the Carolina Panthers on Aug. 12-13.

Japan sending powerhouse team when judo comes home in Tokyo Games

BY GREG BEACHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Judo is coming home at the Tokyo Olympics, and the Japanese team is under a world of pressure.

Fortunately for the host nation, this powerhouse group of athletes is eager to rise to the momentousness of this moment in their sport, which was born in Japan and introduced to the Olympics at the previous Tokyo Games 57 years ago.

This competition in the martial art created by Jigoro Kano in the 19th century is among the most anticipated events in Tokyo this summer. Judo's combination of athletic force and cerebral grace is no less than an aspirational hallmark of the Japanese soul, its essence filtered through decades of patient study and training to synchronize technique and strength, to merge body and spirit.

The Gentle Way — judo's literal translation — is fundamental to the Japanese Olympic movement, but the judokas charged with preserving this tradition don't always think in such enlightened terms.

Just ask Naohisa Takato, who will compete in the men's 132 pounds category on the first day of the Olympics.

"I had enough of the humiliating experience of ending up with a bronze medal in Rio," Takato said. "In the Tokyo Olympics, I'll definitely seize the gold. With whatever kind of judo, however unrefined that could be, I'll get a gold medal and play 'Kimigayo' (Japan's national anthem) in the awarding ceremony."

As if this eight-day tournament wasn't already significant enough, the players will compete at the Nippon Budokan, the hallowed arena built for the first Olympic judo events. Japan won three of the four available gold medals in 1964 at the Budokan, now considered the spiritual home of martial arts.

KELLY

The day after Thanksgiving, Angela Kelly was in Phoenix with her family to watch son Carson compete in a hydroplane race when her life changed forever.

Rushed into surgery, the aneurysm was successfully removed but she faced a long road to recovery.

Over the next two months, Angela would live in a hospital room in the Barrows Neurological Institute in Phoenix has she learned to breathe on her own and to walk again.

The boat-racing community immediately came together to support their stricken friend. Miss Madison driver Jeff Bernard and his wife, Christabelle, along with J. Michael's teammate, Corey Peabody, set up a GoFundMe account to help pay for expenses and the U-12 Graham Trucking team, Kelly's team at the time, sold shirts and raised money.

Almost daily, updates were posted on Facebook on Angela's condition.

On Jan. 30, Angela Kelly was finally cleared to fly home to Bonney Lake, Washington, and begin her recovery.

A month later, J. Michael Kelly left the Graham Trucking team to begin driving for the new Strong Racing Team.

As Angela Kelly recovered, she began spending more and more time in the Strong Racing shop.

The more she was around the board and crew, the better she got.

"It was like therapy," Angela said.

On Sunday, J. Michael Kelly steered the U-8 Miss Tri-Cities to victory in Guntersville, his fourth-straight win in the H1 Unlimited Series and 13th overall.

Angela got to see every heat and was on the stage with Carson and Asher as JMK received the Southern Cup.

"I'm not trying to turn this into her show, nothing compares to what that young lady went through," said PA announcer Brad Luce, during the awards ceremony at Guntersville. "She is a miracle standing here on this stage."

Jesse Winker's 19th homer, a two-run drive to right-center in the fifth off Nabil Crismatt, got them within a run, but they went 1 for 16 with 10 strikeouts after that.

Tony Santillan (1-2) gave up two runs and six hits in three innings for the Reds, and a parade of seven relievers followed.

MARATHON MEN

The Reds played the sixth game in a string of 18 in a row that will take them to the All Star break. By then they will have played 33 games in 34 days.

Monday was supposed to have been an off day, but Cincinnati had to make up a June 4 rainout game with the Phillies.

With late afternoon temperatures hovering near 100 degrees at Great American Ball park on Tuesday, the Reds skipped batting practice and pregame workouts on the field, which they'll also do Wednesday. The Padres play 13 straight before the break.

BIG BATS

Castellanos, Tyler Naquin and Jesse Winker have collected six-plus RBIs in a game this season, making the Reds the first big league team to have three different outfielders with a six-RBI game before the All-Star break, according to STATS.

WELCOME TO THE SHOW

Cincinnati's seventh-inning rally was sparked by Alejo Lopez, who was called up earlier in the day from Triple-A Louisville to make his major league debut.

He pinch-hit with one out and singled on the first pitch.

Lopez also singled on the first pitch he saw at the Triple-A level after being promoted from Double-A on June 4.

CF Tyler Naquin missed a second game with a sore right wrist. Akiyama started in his place. ... RHP Sonny Gray (groin) said he will start for the Reds on Friday after a rehab outing at Triple-A Louisville.

JCBT approves contract with VMI

Visit Madison Inc. still needs to sign off on deal

BY BOB DEMAREE

After about six months of deliberation, a contract between the Jefferson County Board of Tourism and Visit Madison Inc., was adopted Tuesday by JCBT at its monthly meeting pending approval by the VMI board.

VMI Board President Lucy Dattilo is hopeful to have a response soon whether the board approves the proposal.

The contract would provide $14,167 per month toward VMI's operating expenses. It doesn't specify an amount for marketing, and JCBT Board President David Bramer explained the amount for marketing will be determined as VMI submits its proposed budget with a strategic plan. As JCBT reviews that, it will determine if that amount is approved. The contract also provides that JCBT can decrease the amount it provides for marketing if the county innkeeper's tax "decreases by an amount of 20% or more of the five-year running average and during that same period (excluding 2020)."

There was considerable discussion about the procedure of shifting toward an approval process of JCBT's budget going through the Jefferson County Council. Board member Nancy Crisp asked for assurance that JCBT will be able to review the language prepared by the attorneys before being submitted to the County Council at its July 20 meeting.

The contract between JCBT and VMI would run through March 31, 2022. Past discussions have indicated operational funding would be paid quarterly, along with marketing funds, which will be dependent on what's being received through the county innkeepers tax.

In addition to approving the contract, JCBT also agreed to appropriate $14,167 toward VMI's operations in June, which had not previously been funded.

In other business:

• Board member Todd Boone proposed forming a steering committee to develop a collaborative county marketing plan for Jefferson County that will be led by Dan Galvin, owner of Content-1, a marketing digital advertising firm based in Louisville, and Michael Fortunato, a consultant with Creative Insight Community Development, which specializes in solutions to economic and community development. Both have Madison connections with Galvin growing up in Madison and Fortunato now living in Madison. Both participated in the Jefferson County Tourism Caucus in March.

Boone proposed they each be hired for $1,200 per month for the next six months for a total of $14,400.

Linda Lytle, who served as executive director of VMI for 22 years until retiring at the end of 2016, said JCBT was formed in the early 1990s as a tax commissioning board for the county's innkeepers tax, and that VMI was created because they "needed people who realized what tourism is" and knew how to promote Jefferson County. She said VMI has a board in place that makes strategic marketing plans (including an annual retreat), and expressed JCBT is "doing double duty if that group is taking over marketing."

Boone said he wants to develop a strategic plan "to connect all the dots" and bring together "all groups of those people who want to see it better for Madison." He said both Galvin and Fortunato bring professional expertise with the added dimension that they already have knowledge of the community.

Tami Hagemier, a past JCBT board member, emphasized that in addition to organizational groups that those involved in business, lodging and attractions should also be involved in the discussion.

Bramer expressed support for the steering committee, but would have liked to have considered other proposals for professionals to lead the effort. The discussion seemed to be moving in that direction when board member Curtis Chatham made a motion to hire Galvin and Fortunato with Crisp seconding and board members Boone and Wendy Lawson agreeing, providing the necessary four votes for approval. Only Bramer voted in opposition.

• Dattilo announced that VMI event coordinator Holly Love recently resigned, turning in her two weeks' notice. She said Erin Kindle has been hired as event coordinator for Ribberfest. Dattilo also said VMI is currently working toward hiring a coordinator for the Madison Chautauqua Festival of Art. "This will be their 50th year, so this will be a big year for the Chautauqua," Dattilo said. She added that VMI is also seeking to hire a marketing specialist and a guest services associate.

• Matt True, representing Madison Regatta, thanked JCBT for its support of this year's race by providing $50,000 earlier this year, along with additional funds for marketing. He also thanked the VMI staff for its work in promoting this year's race.

"They did a great job," said True, noting "they bent over backwards to help us."

Regatta president Greg Thorpe agreed, "Thank you for the opportunity and the partnership."

• Dominic Hagans proposed that an annual Juneteenth event be held in Madison, and asked for JCBT's support. The board encouraged Hagans to submit a proposal. He had been introduced by Hagemier, who hosted a small event in June 19 at Lanthier Winery.

"This is something I'd like to bring to Madison," said Hagans, who noted there aren't many communities with similar events for Juneteenth, which was established as a federal holiday just a couple of weeks ago in commemoration of the emancipation of African-American slaves. "We need to be united and I'm here to start to unite."

Hagans said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney briefly attended the Juneteenth event at the winery, and expressed his support for a Juneteenth event in the future.

THE JEFFERSON COUNTY SEED LIBRARY AT MADISON PUBLIC LIBRARY

Housed on the main floor of the Madison Public Library, the Jefferson County Seed Library is a collection of open-pollinated and heirloom seeds that growers can borrow to plant at home. Seeds are available from the second week in March through October.

Each person may check out up to three packets per visit, to a total of nine packets per season. At the end of the growing season, borrowers are encouraged to save seeds to return to the library and/or keep for their garden next year.

The Seed Library will only accept open-pollinated seeds that have been grown without the use of chemicals. The Seed Library is housed on the main floor of the Madison Public Library.

races are 100% confirmed as of Wednesday. Shane said the team is ready to move forward with whatever happens.

"We were just focused on these first two races and making ourselves better," Shane said. "Once those other races are confirmed, then we'll figure out what we'll do. We'll have some decisions to make for sure."

Jeff Bernard (left) battles with Jamile Nilsen during the third heat of the Southern Cup in Guntersville, Alabama, on Sunday. Bernard drove the black and gold Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison for most of the race but will hand over the reins to Jimmy Shane this weekend.
